The guide is arranged primarily by type of publications (books, periodicals, government publications, etc.). A topical approach to materials cited is provided by a subject index following the citations. The purpose of the guide is to provide access to materials which may serve as a catalyst toward further discussion of ethnic minority problems. INTRODUCTION

During the month of March, 1969, the University Library presented an exhibit of library resources on the life and culture of Mexican-Americans. This guide was compiled to assist students and faculty members in locating these materials. Books, parts of books, and periodical articles are included as well as state and federal government publications, curriculum development guides and current newspapers published for Mexican-Americans. This list is not comprehensive since many ephemeral articles appearing in popular magazines were not cited and the chronological period emphasized was post-1940 with only slight attention to historical antecedents. The subject emphasis is largely sociological. Cultural and political aspects have been somewhat neglected by researchers.

Ralph Guzman's bibliography (California. University at Los Angeles. Graduate School of Business Administration. Mexican-American Study Project. Advance Report no. 3, 1967) served as a basic guide, and standard indexes such as PAIS and Social Sciences and Humanities Index were consulted in order to up-date Guzman's coverage. It should be observed that many typographical and other errors were noted in the Guzman bibliography: so far as possible these were corrected in the present list by comparing each entry with the item in hand.

The guide is arranged by type of publication (i.e., books, articles, government publications) with the exception of the final two sections, (Curriculum Library Materials and Current Mexican-American Newspapers). Within the first three sections, entries are arranged by author or, if anonymous, by title. Government publications and Curriculum Library Materials are arranged by main entry, usually a school or government avency, as it appears in the respective card catalog of either the UCSB Government Publications Department or the Curriculum Library.

Each entry is followed by a call number or an indication of the departmental location in the UCSB Library.

A topical approach to materials cited in this list has been provided by a selective subject index which appears at the end. Individual numbers are assigned to each entry and the entry numbers are entered under the relevant subject headings in the index. To locate material, for example, on the education of Mexican-Americans, the user should turn first to the subject index and locate the heading "Education". Under this heading the individual would find one or more numbers listed in ascending order. The next step would be to turn to the main body of the guide and locate the particular entry number(s). The same procedure should be repeated for any other topics of interest. The user should keep in mind that the subject index is selective and not comprehensive. Therefore, not all entries appear in the index.

This guide will have achieved its primary purpose if materials located by means of it serve as a catalyst toward further discussion of ethnic minority problems.
